EAT OUTINGS

Quicker liquor

Before you can get your flashy new restaurant mentioned on Page Six, you've got to open the doors. And that can mean contractor troubles, staffing woes and a search for the right chef. But the biggest headache usually comes courtesy of the State Liquor Authority—a body that can defer your dream just by stalling approval for a liquor license. To guide you through the bureaucratic thickets involved (and to get your bistro up and running in time for Leonardo DiCaprio's next late-night blitzkrieg), New York City attorney Leonard Fogelman is visiting Peter Kump's next week to discuss federal and state laws pertaining to liquor licensing. Cocktails will not be served. Peter Kump's School of Culinary Arts, 50 W 23rd St between Fifth and Sixth Aves. Call 410-4601 to register. Aug 16 6-8pm. $60.
